WALMART: Your New World Order Superstore

June 15, 2015 – answers.yahoo.com states: Wal-Mart is a large importer out of China due to the fact that they can source and manufacture goods there for sale in the U.S. at a reasonable price. These products were once manufactured here in the U.S. but due to factors such as unions, over regulation of industry by government (perpetrated by the leftist regime here in the U.S.), less capital improvement over the years and failure of industry to recognize the need to re-tool for the technology of this century, and many more issues that reflect the loss of industry in this country. Cheap labor is not the issue as shipping the product from overseas counteracts much of labor issue."

"China has the work force and the will to do what America did in the booming industrial period, however America has become fat and lost its will to produce so Wal-Mart goes to China for its products. That is the relationship."
