FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ACTION ALERT

CRUZ'S CITIZENSHIP Challenged in Lawsuit

January 15, 2016 – newsmax.com posted an article titled, "Cruz's Citizenship Status Challenged in Birther Lawsuit." Their report includes the following:

Sen. Ted Cruz' "birther" nightmare took a dramatic turn Friday after a Texas lawyer filed the first lawsuit challenging his eligibility to serve as president because he was born in Canada.

In court papers, attorney Newton Schwartz Sr. says he filed the action because "the U.S. Constitution is not a popularity document for fair weather only."

The lawsuit, first reported by Bloomberg, was filed in federal court in Texas Thursday and argues the question must be presented to the Supreme Court for a fair shake instead of left up to popular opinion.

"This 229-year question has never been pled, presented to or finally decided by or resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court. Only the U.S. Supreme Court can finally decide, determine judicially and settle this issue now," the lawsuit states.

"However persuasive, one finds each side in this debate, the final decision ultimately rests in the hands of five or more of nine Justices on the Supreme Court as mandated by the Constitution."

Cruz, the son of an American mother and a Cuban father, was born in Canada — a fact that Republican presidential front-runner Donald Trump has gleefully made hay of in recent weeks.
